Historical Note

Kenneth T. Mars, Jr., (1940 – 2011) was a lifelong resident of South Kingstown, Rhode Island. He was the son of Lucille Mars and Kenneth T. Mars, Sr., who was the pastor at the Peace Dale First Church of God. Mars was an African American member of the Narragansett Indian Tribe. He worked at the University of Rhode Island (URI) on the Memorial Student Union custodial staff for 40 years and was a posthumous inductee to URI's Lifetime Service Society. Mars was described by those who knew him as quiet, reserved, and very well liked in the community.

For decades, Mars carried a camera as he walked throughout South Kingstown and captured photographs of the landscapes, neighborhoods, people, and events he encountered. A small portion of the collection documented family events, church services and events, and coworkers at URI. Although Mars was not professionally trained as a photographer, the photographs he captured, printed, and organized into albums represent a cohesive body of work and thoroughly document the built and natural environments of southern Rhode Island between the late 1970s and early 2000s. After his retirement from URI, Mars contracted Lyme disease, which led to his death in 2011. After Mars' death, approximately two-thirds of his collection of photographs were lost. The remaining part of the collection was acquired by John Peterson, a local photographer, and donated to the Center in 2018.

Scope and Content

The Kenneth T. Mars, Jr. Photograph Collection is comprised of photographic prints and captured digital images of the original album pages and loose photographic prints. A total of 27,432 photographic prints have been preserved. Exterior images cover South Kingstown, especially the villages of Kingstown, Wakefield, Peace Dale; the neighboring towns of Narragansett and Charlestown; and other nearby locales. Interior photos are primarily taken in Mars' residence, the Peace Dale First Church of God, and the URI Memorial Student Union. Images are primarily candid and often duplicative. Common subjects include trees, streets/roadways, residences, businesses, URI's campus, the Peace Dale Public Library, animals,

Mars’ relatives and coworkers, and individual people on the streets. Mars organized the photographs in albums roughly chronologically by year. Printed dates appear on most prints, but often do not reflect the date that the photograph was taken (e.g. the printed date appears to be “June 1992,” but the image is of a snow-covered landscape), but instead the dates reflect when the film was developed. As such, it is relatively safe to assume that the photograph was captured within a year prior to the printed date. Photographs without dates have been given a decade range (e.g.: c. early 1980s). Based on these two dating methods, the collection can be determined to have the following chronological distribution:

Decade	Percentage of Collection
1960s	0.01%
1970s	3%
1980s	57%
1990s	33%
2000s	5%

Due to processing constraints, a chronological order of photographs was only able to be established after photo-documentation, rehousing, and arrangement. See Appendix A for a chronological listing of Full-Size Albums, Loose Album Page Groups, Small Albums, and Loose Photo Groups.

The collection is comprised of prints in varying sizes, including: 3.5” x 3.5”, 3.5” x 5”, 4” x 4”, and 4” x 6”. The vast majority of prints are in 3.5” x 3.5” and 3.5” x 5” format.

A small portion of the photographs were discarded due to severe mold and water damage (~1%). These photographs were photo-documented before disposal. See Appendix B for the listing of individual photographs discarded.

Arrangement

Arrangement is dictated by the original order the prints appeared in albums, to the greatest extent possible. At the time of acquisition, the photographic prints were in four states of organization: mostly intact, full-size photo albums; loose, full-size album pages; small, intact albums; and loose photographs. The collection is grouped into series according to these four levels of organization, with the fifth series being digital images created by the Center to document the collection. The loose album pages and loose photos were likely once contained in albums, but the original order cannot be accurately ascertained. The numbering of the albums is arbitrary.

Due to preservation issues of mold, adhesive, acidic paper, and plastics causing long-term damage to the prints, the albums were disassembled, and prints were removed. Photographic prints are physically arranged in the order they appeared in the album and individually labeled as such. A digital image of each page was captured, along with digital images of the album covers for added context, to document the original sequence of the photographs in albums. The arrangement of the digital images follows the arrangement of the physical collection and is housed on multiple platforms. The digital files have been labeled Series V.

The collection is organized into the following series, based on original organization and medium:

Series I: Full-Size Albums

Series II: Loose Album Page Groups

Series III: Small Albums

Series IV: Loose Photograph Groups

Series V: Digital Images

Sub-series I: Full-size Album Digital Images

Sub-series II: Loose Album Page Group Digital Images

Sub-series III: Small Album Digital Images

Sub-series IV: Loose Photograph Group Digital Images

Administrative Information

Access: Any qualified person doing person or scholarly research is permitted to utilize materials in the South County History Center's collection. The Center's processing of Series V of the Kenneth T. Mars, Jr. Collection is on-going, and access to that series may be limited.

Preferred Citation: Photograph [number], Page [album page number], Album/Group [album or group number], Kenneth T. Mars, Jr. Photograph Collection, South County History Center

Provenance: After Mars' death in 2011, custody of the collection fell to his extended family, and it was housed in Mars' former residence. Between 2011 and 2018, a significant portion (estimated to be two-thirds) of the collection was lost. The family gave the remaining collection to John Peterson, a photographer who knew Mars, around 2012. Peterson donated the collection, with the support of Mars' extended relatives, in 2018.

Processed by: Hilary Gunnels and Rachel Strashnick, with the generous support of the National Endowment for the Humanities

Copyrights: The South County History Center holds all copyrights to the images contained within the Kenneth T. Mars, Jr. Collection.

Series V: Digital Images

The form of the Mars collection at the time of its donation to the Center was photo-documented in 2020, prior to the rehousing of the photographs. The digital images of albums, loose album pages, small albums, and loose photos were captured in the following ways:

Full-Size Albums: image of album front cover, image of individual pages, image of album back cover. If photos were attached to the inside of the front cover, the image is labeled "Page 0". Each image contains metadata: Album Number, Page Number, Photo Size, and an alphanumeric grid to identify individual photos.

Small Albums: Since the physical layout of photographs in small albums was effectively one photograph per page, each photograph is numbered individually and 4, 8, or 9 photos are documented within a single digital image. Please note: the layout of photographs in these images does not reflect a layout that Mars created. For photos that were 3.5" x 3.5", a grid of 9 photographs was used; for photos that were 3.5" x 5" format, a grid of 8 photographs was used; for photos that were 4" x 6" format, a grid of 4 photographs was used. Each image contains metadata: album number, photo size, and numeric grid to identify individual photos.

Loose Photo Groups: Loose photos were grouped in into batches of approximately 100 photographs, and digital images were created using the same structure as the Small Albums. See above paragraph for specifications. Each image contains metadata: group number, photo size, and numeric grid to identify individual photos.

Digital images are stored in folders corresponding to the album or group number assigned. Images were processed for color and brightness accuracy, and files were renamed to correspond to album/group number and page/image number. Camera RAW and Unedited JPEG format files (original, unedited images) are retained; after digital processing, an archival-quality TIFF and lower resolution JPEG copy of each image was created.

A 1TB external hard drive containing a back-up copy of the digital collections is stored Box 24.
